19th Annual William E. Colby
Military Writers’ Symposium

AFTER THE WARS:
What Have We Learned from Iraq and Afghanistan and What is the Future Role of the U.S. and Our Military?

April 9-10
Norwich University
to the 19th-anniversary program of the William E. Colby Military Writers’ Symposium!

A program to bring influential writers to the campus of Norwich University was originally conceived by past President W. Russell Todd. The genesis of the program took shape in 1994 at the 175th-anniversary Medal of Honor Gala honoring Norwich’s only living recipient, Capt. James N. Burt. It was at this event, attended by W.E.B. Griffin, Ambassador William E. Colby and myself, that the concept of a writers’ program began to take shape. Staunchly endorsed by Norwich President Richard W. Schneider, the symposium became a reality under the able leadership of Executive Director Ed Tracy.

In 1996, Norwich hosted a small but prestigious group of writers on campus for a two-day series of lectures and panel discussions. Among them was Ambassador Colby. That first year, the event was known as the Norwich University Military Writers’ Symposium.

Colby’s presence defined the character of the first symposium. His untimely death soon afterwards prompted the University to dedicate future programs to the memory of this South Burlington high school graduate and Norwich honorary degree recipient.

It was natural for Norwich to develop the program around Bill Colby’s legacy. In this media-driven period in our history, with fewer and fewer dedicated public servants whose service is not tied to a personal agenda, Colby’s record of selfless service to this country shines even brighter. The easy way out is to tell people what they want to hear: Colby never took the easy way. He was the exemplar of a selfless public servant who was never afraid to tell the truth, no matter how unpleasant or portentous the consequences.

The purpose of the William E. Colby Military Writers’ Symposium is to expose Norwich students, faculty, alumni and the public to the works and views of authors, historians, journalists and national figures. It should educate, enlighten and inspire.

Each of the participants comes to Norwich for two reasons. They wish to make a difference in the lives of our students through their interaction in a variety of lectures, social functions and innovative in-class sessions that make up the heart of the program. They also come to further the debate on current issues of interest through interaction.
In April 1997, our experimental program became the William E. Colby Writers’ Symposium, now known nationally as “The Colby.” At the formal dedication ceremony, a Who’s Who in military writing was on hand to participate in one of the most stimulating programs in the program’s history. Joining us were Tom Clancy, Steven Coonts, Harold Coyle, Winston Groom, Fred Chiaventone and Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. Also attending in 1997 was Colby’s son, Paul, who has been a stalwart supporter and devoted friend of Norwich.

Since then the symposium has grown to the national prominence it enjoys today. We have hosted more than 100 military writers, historians, and biographers, including some of the brightest names in the business. As we celebrate the 19th anniversary of the Colby Symposium, we do so in the knowledge that the world has changed significantly since its inception—and so has our program. We have never avoided hard issues central to the public’s understanding. The 2014 program is the latest example of our commitment to making The Colby a relevant and meaningful experience.

The Colby is the only program of its kind in existence at an American university. It has given Norwich University students the opportunity to meet some of the most prominent military writers and historians of our time, and gain a better understanding of the world through their eyes. We look forward to many more years of programs that will enrich Norwich. I sincerely thank each of the outstanding participants who have made the Colby Symposium possible.

Bill Colby would be immensely proud of the program that bears his name.

2014 PARTICIPANTS

Logan Beirne

Logan Beirne is an Olin Scholar at Yale Law School. Prior to that appointment, he practiced as an attorney with the law firm of Sullivan & Cromwell LLP and was a Fulbright Scholar at Queen’s University. He received his Doctor of Jurisprudence from Yale Law School, where he was a Coker Fellow. He and his writings have been featured in USA Today, The Wall Street Journal, The New York Post, The Washington Post, The Daily News, Reuters and other media outlets. Logan has served as a director on the boards of multiple charities and is admitted to the New York and Connecticut Bars. Blood of Tyrants: George Washington & the Forging of the Presidency is his first book.

John L. Borling

John L. Borling is a highly decorated, retired Air Force major general who has served worldwide in high-level command and staff positions. A fighter pilot, he is a graduate of the United States Air Force Academy and the National War College, as well as executive programs at Harvard Business School and the John F. Kennedy School of Government. He was also a White House Fellow. During the Vietnam War, he was shot down by ground fire. Seriously injured, he was captured while trying to evade and spent more than six years as a prisoner of war in Hanoi. Currently, he occupies leadership positions in multiple civic and business organizations. He is the author of the acclaimed book Taps on the Walls: Poems from the Hanoi Hilton.

Carlo D’Este

Carlo D’Este is a retired United States Army lieutenant colonel and a highly regarded military historian.

He is the author of numerous books, including Decision in Normandy; Bitter Victory: The Battle for Sicily, 1943; World War II in the Mediterranean; Fatal Decision: Anzio and the Battle for Rome; Patton: A Genius for War; Eisenhower: A Soldier’s Life 1890-1945; and most recently Warlord: A Life of Winston Churchill at War, 1874-1945.

D’Este received his bachelor’s degree from Norwich University in 1958, a master’s degree from the University of Richmond in 1974 and an honorary doctorate of humane letters from Norwich in 1992.
Douglas Macgregor

Douglas Macgregor is a decorated combat veteran and the author of five books. A widely-sought-after consultant, he is the executive vice president of Burke-Macgregor Group LLC. Macgregor received his PhD from the University of Virginia in international relations. He was commissioned in the Regular Army in 1976 after four years at West Point and one year at VMI. Macgregor retired with the rank of colonel in 2004. He is best known for his leadership in the Battle of the 73 Easting, the Army’s largest tank battle since World War II, and for his books on military transformation. His new book, Margin of Victory, will be available in 2015.

Jack Segal

Jack Segal twice served on the National Security Council: first as director for Russia, Ukraine and Eurasia, and then as director for non-proliferation. From 2002 to 2010, he was the senior political advisor to the NATO Commander responsible for Afghanistan. Segal has also been Chief of Staff to the Under Secretary of State for International Security and served on arms control delegations in Geneva. Overseas, he served in Botswana, Greece, Israel and Moscow. He was later named Consul General to central Russia.

Segal twice served in Vietnam (4th and 25th Infantry Divisions) and in Germany with the Army Security Agency. He is an adjunct professor at Northwestern Michigan College.

Stephen Pomeroy

Col. Stephen Pomeroy is currently serving as the associate director and lecturer for the School of Business & Management at Norwich University. Before 2008, Pomeroy served as the Dean of the School of National Services and the Professor of Naval Science.

As a Marine Corps leader, Pomeroy served as commanding officer of a carrier-based F/A-18 Fighter Squadron, a Marine Aircraft Group and later of a NROTC Unit. He has participated in exercises and combat operations across the globe and has extensive operational and combat experience.

Pomeroy has master’s degrees in business administration, military studies, and national security strategy.
IN MEMORIAM

Jason Segal ’60
November 22, 1938 – December 24, 2013

Jason Segal was one of the founding supporters of the Colby Symposium, and was so passionate about the program that he invited some of his classmates and best friends to become involved. Without their steadfast support the Colby might otherwise have ceased to exist.

Jason had a generous spirit and an unwavering passion for Norwich. Throughout his life he gave back to the University in a myriad of ways that ranged from serving for fifteen years as a University Trustee, and later as a Trustee Emeritus, to quietly mentoring students.

Born in Albany, N.Y., Jason was a business administration major at Norwich, a 2d Lt. in the Corps of Cadets, a member of the regimental drill team, the Varsity Club, the manager of the varsity basketball team, and a participant in Mountain and Cold Weather Training. Upon graduation he was commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the United States Army and served for six years as an Armor officer, including a tour of duty in Germany.

Jason was a diamond merchant and enjoyed his work and clients so much that he never fully retired. He had a great interest in military history and made yearly trips with long-time friends to many of the famous battlefields of Europe.

All of us who have had the privilege of knowing Jason Segal are better people for it. What made Jason such a truly unique individual was that he not only epitomized Norwich’s values but also imbued in us his great devotion to the university. His acceptance of the good and bad in life, tempered with his love and wonderful sense of humor, helped us all feel able to face the challenges that each day brings. We will always cherish his warmth, kindness and generosity that are memorable parts of his enduring legacy.

Logan Beirne

Named for the late ambassador and former CIA director William E. Colby, the Colby Award recognizes a first work of fiction or non-fiction that has made a significant contribution to the public's understanding of intelligence operations, military history or international affairs. The William E. Colby Award began at Norwich University in 1999.

Formerly an attorney with Sullivan & Cromwell law firm in New York City and a Fulbright Scholar at Queen’s University, Logan Beirne is an Olin Scholar at Yale Law School. He received his JD from Yale Law School, where he was a Coker Fellow and was awarded the Edgar M. Cullen Prize.

Blood of Tyrants (Encounter Books, 2013) follows the nation's first commander-in-chief as he and other founding fathers struggle to define issues that are still relevant today. Washington is brought to life as both a supremely powerful “new type of dictator” and a champion of the rights and liberty of citizens of an emerging country. Beirne leads with the idea that complicated wartime issues debated 200 years ago can inform modern conversations on leadership, federal debt, citizen's rights and the balance of power.

“I am proud to endorse Logan Beirne’s Blood of Tyrants as the winner of the 2014 Colby Award,” said Carlo D’Este, executive director of the William E. Colby Military Writers’ Symposium. “His book is a superbly researched and elegantly written account of our first commander-in-chief’s leadership of the American Revolution, and is a major contribution to our knowledge and understanding of George Washington as the father of our country.”

“I am honored to receive the William E. Colby Award. William Colby’s tireless efforts to defend democracy and civil liberties epitomize our founding ideals, and I am humbled to receive his namesake honor,” Beirne said.

A $5,000 author honorarium is provided through a grant from the Chicago-based Tawani Foundation. The award and honorarium will be presented at Norwich University during the 2014 Colby Military Writers’ Symposium at the Meet the Authors Dinner on April 10, 2014.

Author and symposium namesake Bill Colby, had a long and distinguished career in public service.

A native of St. Paul, Minn., Colby received an A.B. degree cum laude from Princeton University in 1940, where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa, and an L.L.B. in 1947 from Columbia University Law School.

The son of a career Army officer, Colby was a highly decorated veteran of World War II who parachuted into France and Norway to work with resistance forces for the Office of Strategic Services. His wartime service earned him Silver and Bronze Star service medals, the French Croix de Guerre, Norway’s St. Olaf’s Medal and a British Mention in Dispatches.

Colby began his post-war career with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA). From 1951 to 1962, he served in the American embassies in Stockholm, Rome and Saigon. He was ambassador and deputy to the commander of the U.S. Military Assistance Command Vietnam from 1968 to 1971.

He served as CIA director from 1973 to 1976, and moved on to become a consultant and lecturer on international and domestic political matters to corporations and governments. He also practiced international and American law in Washington, D.C.

For public service, he received the National Service Medal, the Distinguished Intelligence Medal and the State Department’s Distinguished Honor Award. Ambassador Colby authored two important books, Lost Victory: A Firsthand Account of America’s Involvement in Vietnam and Honorable Men - My Life in the CIA. He was a long-time friend of Norwich University, which awarded him an honorary Doctorate in Public Service in 1992.

In honor of his commitment to Norwich and the Military Writers’ Symposium, the program was renamed the William E. Colby Military Writers’ Symposium in 1997.
